SELECT STORY.

CYRIL TREVOR'S WOODNYMPH.

Some years ago I stood musing on a balcony overlooking the Basse Plante at Pau. I had been spending many months there with my uncle, who required change for his health.

Through the window I saw my uncle, Lucius Trevor, reclining in an armchair before the smouldering logs upon the hearth. The attitude of repose, the flexible, goodhumored lips, now parted in a genial smile, flatly contradicted the comparison, and left no doubt as to the character of the good old gentleman.

"I'm glad you've come in," he commenced, as I sat down. "Cyril, my boy, what do you think of getting married?."

"A proceeding in the abstract natural; in particular, unpleasant," I replied. "What has suggested the idea, now, sir?"

"My old age, Cyril, and failing health," returned my uncle; "and you are the last of our race. It would be a pity to let the family die out. You ought to marry, Cyril." Up went the eyebrows, and the firelight executed a jig on the tip of his nose.

I groaned. This was an old point of difference between us. I could not recognize in his ardent desire to see me settled in life any reason for burdening myself with a companion whose sympathies were likely to be at variance with mine. Even the prospect of an heir was not sufficient to lessen the dislike I had conceived towards all of the feminine gender. Allowing that the sentiment was unnatural in a young man, it certainly increased in exact proportion to the eagerness my uncle showed to provide me with a wife against my inclination. Therefore it is not surprising that the impending discussion provoked anything but gratitude in me.

"In my opinion," continued Mr. Trevor, "it isn't good for a young man to wander about the world with plenty of money in his pocket and no responsibility to steady him. Why don't you choose a pleasant girl to share the cares of Trevorhurst with you when I am no longer here? There are as many as one could wish for, even in Pau, my boy."

"Oh, as many more!" was my cynical response. "Only, preferring to be married for merit rather than money, I should like to know something of the young lady herself, and thanks to folly and fashion that feat is well nigh impossible. Can't we let the subject drop, sir? I am thoroughly tired of it."

"Now, Cyril, just listen. You represent the good of life to me. I took you when your parents died; reared you as my heir—my son; and you have always been a good lad—always. I can't last long—you know I can't. I grow weaker every day. Do me this favor. This one favor. Promise to look seriously about you while we are in Pau. I will not ask you to propose to any one. No, no! But to please me, to gratify an old man's whim, consider the subject seriously."

"Enough, sir!" I answered, touched by this appeal. "I give you my promise. You deserve far more than that from me. I will think the matter over carefully, and do my best to meet your wishes."

"Thank you, my boy!" exclaimed my uncle, rubbing his hands together. "You always were a good lad; very!"

Nevertheless, I was greatly annoyed.

One afternoon, not many days after the preceding conversation, I strolled across the bridge over the Gave, intending to walk off a fit of illhumor incident on meeting three fashionable young ladies in the Place Gramont. A little by-path, seeming to invite investigation, enticed me, and, taking it, I found it led throgh a thick plantation, which afforded a grateful relief after the dust and glare of the high road.

Presently, emerging from the wood, the ripple of running water attracted my attention. Following the sound, I arrived at a group of beech trees, and, forcing my way through the underwood, saw a natural basin where the stream had collected into a clear pool a few feet deep.

Throwing myself down, I reclined upon a couch of fallen leaves, concealed by the undergrowth, which still permitted me to enjoy the peaceful beauty of the scene. My happiness was complete but not lasting, for at that moment a sweet voice broke the stillness.

Merily, merily shall I live now,
Under the blossom that hangs on the bough

"The nymph of the stream," I murmured. "Here she comes!"

Crish, crackle, swish! The brambles on the other side were parted, and a young girl stood upon the bank. She seemed about 17, but well formed for her age. Her feet were concealed by sabots, and she wore a short cloak, like that of a French officer, over her dress. An old hat, which had slipped back during the struggle with the thorns, framed a quaint little face more quaintly still.

Flinging an armful of ferns on the ground she seated herself on the brink of the fountain, tapping the surface of the water with the point of her sabot. She was strangely beautiful, but the great, soft, brown eyes, fixed dreamily on the surface of the pool, would have redeemed the most irregular features from the charge of ugliness.

"I will!" she suddenly cried. "There is no one here to see and no one anywhere to care."

I watched her in amused perplexity. The girl pleased me, and the wild, graceful freedom of each motion contrasted agreeably with the studied elegance of polite society.

"What a goose I am," she soliloquized, pausing in the act of throwing off her little sabots, as a slight change of my position rustled the leaves of which my couch was composed. Every leaf that stirs must be construed by my guilty conscience into some one looking at me. A pretty sight they would see, too. The idea is laughable.

She took off her hat and let loose a mass of dark curly hair, which floated about her shoulders in picturesque disorder. Then, lying down on the edge of the pool, she stooped over and dipped her face in the water, pouring it with her little hands over the top of her head, till her curls were dripping like a water spaniel; then laughing as she wrung out a shower of diamonds.

At that moment an accident occurred for which I have been thankful ever since. In casting off the sabots, one had fallen dangerously near the edge of the bank, and this, now receiving an impetus from its heedless little owner, quietly slipped into the water, commencing a journey on its own account by jogging over the miniature waves with most prosaic obstinacy. A cry of dismay followed the discovery. What was to be done? The shoe was already out of reach and how could it be recovered? I laughed silently. All trace of my dislike to women had evaporated. I blessed that shoe and waited heartlessly till the sense of loss brought tears into the brown eyes; then softly drawing aside the branches I stood up and spoke.

"Mademoiselle!" was all I said, though I saw that she was English.

Such a start! Such a blush! It rose over her eyebrows; flooded the sun burned neck; affected, I verily believe, the tiny feet themselves. Her shyness conquered mine. I longed to set her more at ease.

"Mademoiselle! Pardon me. I would not have presumed to make my presence known had it not been for this misfortune," said I respectfully.

The Nymph hid her face.

"Will you permit me to attempt the rescue?" I persisted.

"Oh, sir, have pity! I thought I was alone. If you can assist me pray do so!" she answered, striving to conceal her tears.

Poor little thing! Decidedly that sabot must be obtained.

"If mademoiselle would kindly aid me by throwing stones from her side, so as to drive the shoe towards the shore," I suggested, ignoring her distress.

Dashing her hand across her eyes the girl immediately set about collecting missiles, which were then flung by my directions—at first badly, but gradually regaining confidence her aim improved, and to my great joy, forgetting in the excitement all the disagreeable attendant circumstances, her clear laugh rang through the fragrant air, each peal re-echoing within my heart.

Here was a revelation. In all my life a perfectly natural girl, at the same time perfectly well-bred, had never crossed my path Hundreds of pretty damsels had walked, danced and posed before me for the sake of Trevorhurst, but never one whose grace had not been cultivated, made to order; whose smile was not a languid elongation of the lip. On the other hand, the frank abruptness of the country lasses was no better; loud voices from charming women jar upon my nerves; so that between this Scylla and Charybdis, I became a man whose books and horses represented to him the only pleasures in life. Now, to upset these crude ideas, came a maiden with bare feet gleaming through the moss, over whose entire person sweet modesty had thrown her veil. If but the mind equalled the appearance in simplicity, my uncle's wish would not seem so hard to gratify.

Meanwhile, the would-be boat drifted nearer to the land, and having, by means of a long stick, obtained possession of it, I dried it in my handkerchief before surrendering it to the owner, who dared not raise her eyes to aid her faltering thanks. Feigning not to observe how the sabots were resumed, I occupied myself in gathering up the ferns strewn upon the bank, talking incessantly. I told her how the autumn tints had charmed me so that town life faded into insignificance before the freedom of the uplands, and as I praised a bond of sympathy sprang up between us, and we chatted like two old familiar friends.

"Are you an artist? she asked at length. "I am quite sure that you are English. Besides, you are too—courteous—for a Frenchman."

I laughed. "Thank you. No, I am no artist, except so far as appreciation of beauty can make one. I am—a student of human nature, at present intent on becoming acquainted with the neighborhood of Pau from a different standpoint to that of the ordinary visiter. Will you help me?"

My companion smiled, complying by describing favorite nooks, hidden like this fairy pond, from prying curiosty. Leading her on to speak of herself, I learned that her name was Beatrice Ross; that she lived with her father in a villa on the Coteaux, with no other companion than an old housekeeper. Sometimes her only sister came from Pau, where she resided with an aunt, to visit her, but these events were comparatively rare. To our mutual delight, in this sister was a pretext found for our acquaintance. I had often met her at parties, and she had described me to Beatrice as a "woman hater, but immensely rich."

"I don't know why she called you that," said my Nymph, doubtfully. "You are not unkind to me, but quite the reverse."

"Never judge a man by what you hear," returned I, gravely. "Man is a many-sided animal; gentle to those who treat him well; the opposite when badly managed. He must be humored, Miss Beatrice. But you are never lonely, separated so much from all society? Do you never wish to be with your sister?

"No," she answered, quickly. "I am quite happy as I am. Now and then I long to see the beauties of other lands, but that cannot be. And, after all, though nature may look otherwise, she cannot be more beautiful than here."

"You are right," said I; "there may be difference in kind but not of degree."

"So I believe. People often say the Doteaux are disappointing, the Pyrenees not to be compared to other mighty ranges, but the fault, it seems to me is theirs. If you come to nature," she continued, waving a little hand to illustrate her meaning, "with a fixed idea, there must be a hill here, a fountain there, icebergs glittering in the sunlight yonder, and moss-grown ruins where I stand, of course, one will not always find them. But come to the great earth mother saying, 'Show me what thou wilt!' And what loveliness she then unfolds! The morning sky of palest yellow, darkest indigo and clearest rose, so shaded as to be a miracle; no harsh discord, but all a blending harmony; the pure air shaking the dew-drops off the trembling grass; the melody of fifty different birds, and the solemn tremor of the forest trees. At midday the deep hush of sleep—only the cicala to make the silence felt. At night the glorious stars and peaceful slumber of the woodlands. Never twice the same!"

As she stood, with hands clasped over the ferns, her eyes shining with a strange light, fixed on the quivering beeches, I almost fancied that she saw the earth-mother herself beckoning from dim recesses of the whisper-shadows, and that, like some heroine of German folk-lore, she was fast losing the consciousness of mortality under the influence of a mystic charm, when unhappily the snap of a dry twig aroused her, and with a gentle dignity she bade me farewell.

"We shall meet again?" I asked, detaining her hand.

"Who can tell?" was the reply, as pushing aside the brambles, with a merry laugh, the wood-nymph vanished out of sight.

I wanted to followed but dared not, retracting instead, the dusty way to Pau, oppressed by a strange sensation of loss, and dizzy with new ideas. Oh, child!—yet no child, but woman in all the depth and tenderness of unsophisticated wisdom—who could have told but yesternight thy lot and mine were interwoven in the weft of time? Ah, that it may not prove a passing golden thread, glittering against the darkness of a lonely life, but that the two may twine together all through the years the future holds concealed!

It was not difficult to interest my uncle in the adventure. The elder Miss Ross had impressed him favorably by her beauty and accomplishments, but he fully approved of my winning a wife whose youthful mind could readily adapt itself to her husband's views and customs. However well Miss Ross might play the lady of Manor her younger sister would probably be a better match for me. Then the question arose, how to gain Mr. Ross' consent? Plainly the road to the villa lay through his sister Mme. B——'s drawing room. My uncle, therefore, proposed calling on her, stating my wishes to see more of her niece, and enlisting her sympathies on my behalf. As the plan seemed feasible, I consented gladly, promising to await the issue with all the patience at my command.

Weeks passed on without visible result. My uncle only responded to my importunities by mysterious nods or more exasperating proverbs. I wandered all over the country in the hope of meeting Beatrice, returning at close of day more despondent than ever. I haunted the pool, but though the sunelves played upon the surface no girlish figure came through the brambles, no sweet voice sang the praises of the wood. Granted that all my attempts began and ended in folly—what will not a man do when he is in love? I grew disconted and peevish, and augmented my private woes by anxiety about my uncle's health, he having caught a cold which he seemed unable to shake off. We did not talk much in those days; we were not sociable companions; he sat on one side of the fire, rolling his head and coughing; I sat on the other, responding by impatient sighs.

One evening, on coming home in a more dejected mood than usual I was greeted with a volley of chuckles that must have been the death of any other man.

"You seem merry, sir," I remarked, crossly, throwing down my hat.

"Very merry!" he replied, rolling his head fearfully. "I think you need change of air, Cyril. We go to Mentone or Rome. They say the climate is more exhilarating and quite as mild as this. What do you say to it?"

"I'm well enough, sir. But all places are alike to me, and I'm quite ready to accompany you anywhere."

"A very proper frame of mind," he chuckled, gathering his legs up sharply and shooting them out again with equal rapidity. "Very good! Then we'll be off next week. Bye-the bye, Madame B—— has a party to-night, as you know. She wanted me to go, but I said the night air was too great a risk, and told her I'd send you instead. You'll look in, my boy?"

"Certainly, if you promised, sir," I answered morosely. "But, frankly, I wish you had not done so. I am in no humor for frivolity just now."

"Quite right," coughed my uncle satirically. "At your advanced age you ought to have done with frivolity. But you'll go, Cyril?"

Accordingly, about 8:30, I presented myself at Mme. B——'s. The rooms were full, and, as I paused on the threshold, if my face betrayed my secret feelings, its expression must have been exceedingly ungracious. Madame, however, welcomed me kindly, and, after a few words, said:

"You have met my niece before, I understand. Perhaps a mere formal introduction would not be out of place. Beatrice, my dear, allow me to present to you Mr. Cyril Trevor."

My head reeled, my heart stopped as in the radiant being before me I recognized my long lost wood-nymph.

It is impossible to recall what followed. Everything was enveloped in a rozy haze of blissful incredulity. When I recovered somewhat we were sitting together in a distant part of the room, screened from the public gaze by rows of plants, from which I conclude that even at that trying moment, my native common sense had not entirely deserted me.

The time passed with terrible rapidity. Beatrice told me that her aunt had come a few days since to the villa, and after a long conversation with Mr. Ross had her carried off to Pau. Making good use of my time, a bond of sympathy was binding us very closely together when Madame at last broke in upon our solitude.

"Really, Mr. Trevor, I cannot permit you to monopolize my niece all the evening. You may call to-morrow if you like, but I must separate you now. Beatrice, Miss Lucy wishes to speak to you about Lady C's ball. Are you going, Mr. Trevor?"

"I had not intended accepting the invitation on account of my uncle's health," I replied, "but if Miss Ross will favor me with her hand—" I stopped and looked at Beatrice.

"I am not a good dancer," she said, blushing. "You will be sorry for having asked me afterwards."

"Never!" I cried fervently. "Grant my request, and I shall be happy for life."

Madame laughed heartily at my ardor, and having obtained the desired promise, I took my leave.

"Ho! ho!" chuckled my uncle when I reappeared in his room. "Shall we go to Rome, next week, Cyril? Do you want bracing, now my boy?"

"The wind has changed, sir," I answered gravely. "The journey will scarcely be necessary on my account. Had you any idea that Miss Ross would be at her aunt's to night, sir?" I inquired.

"Of course I had," chuckled

ATTENTION DEMOCRATS!

Next Tuesday, November 3rd, you will be called upon to cast your ballots for Conrad B. Day, our candidate for State Treasurer. If you wish to elect him, see that every Democratic vote in your district is polled. Do not leave a single Democratic vote at home. Stir up those who are indifferent, provide means to haul old men, and those who live some distance away, to the polls. If you do this, the day will be ours. Do not neglect the county ticket in your zeal for the State ticket. We have good men who are worthy of and deserving of our support. Once more, go to the polls, and vote the Democratic ticket, the whole ticket, and nothing but the ticket.

D. LOWENBERG,
Chairman Co. Com.

The republican county committee met last Saturday and made the following nominations for county offices; District Attorney, W. E. Smith of Berwick; Sheriff, E. D. Hagenbuch of Lightstreet; Coroner, John Appleman of Buck Horn; Jury Commissioner, G. A. Buckingham of Berwick. Mr. Buckingham will be elected under the minority representation system, and will make a capable and satisfactory official.

Our republican contemporaries through the state, that have made so much ado whenever they imagined they could find anything unsavory in the record of any appointee of the democratic national administration, have not had so much to say about David Monat now running as a republican candidate for member of council in Philadelphia. This same man has but recently served a term in Moyamensing, for election frauds, and his record is so bad that even the Philadelphia Press cannot endorse it and calls upon the republicans of the ward where Mouat was nominated, to withdraw his name and substitute some one who is not a jail-bird. Mouat like Quay, is seeking vindication, and is not likely to withdraw from the ticket. If the republicans of Philadelphia shall vindicate him, they will have no room to criticise any democratic appointment hereafter.

The Primary Election Law.

THE SUPREME COURT EVADES THE QUESTION OF ITS CONSTITUTIONALITY.

In the Supreme Court at Pittsburg a case has been decided in which the constitutionality of the Primary election laws of the State was distinctly involved, but in the opinion handed down the issue was very cleverly dodged. The case came up from the Common Pleas Court of Greene county, and was entitled "Commonwealth for use of Poor Directors of Greene County vs. Wells," and was an action brought to recover $200, the amount of a wager made on the result of a primary election, and $400 additional, the penalty prescribed under the General Election law in the Court below.

The decision was in favor of Wells, Judge Ingram holding that the amount could not be collected, for the reason that the Primary Election law was not Constitutional. In the opinion filed the Court affirmed the judgment of the Court below to the extent of saying that the money could not be collected, but refrained from touching on the constitutionality of the law, saying that the question had not been raised properly; in brief, the Court held that the action must be brought under a specific statute, and as the Primary or General Election laws did not provide against betting on primaries, there was nothing upon which a claim could be based. It was intimated that if the question of constitutionality was squarely raised the law would be splintered.

The Corporations and the State.

From the Christian Union.

Men who get a charter from the State for the purpose of building a highway ought not be able to keep it for the purpose of preventing the highway from being built, and in this particular case this attempt to prevent competition appears on its face to be a palpable violation of the state Constitution which provides that "no railroad, canal, or other corporation, or the lessees, purchasers, or managers of any railroad or canal corporation, shall consolidate the stock, property or franchises of, or in any way control, any other railroad or canal corporation owning or having under its control a parallel or competing line." Legal proceedings have already been commenced under this clause to prevent the consummation of the sale. The defense is probably foreshadowed by Mr. Chauncey M. Depew, the President of the New York Central, who claims that "a charter, a lot of holes in the ground, some culverts, some grading, and a partially purchased right of way" do not constitute a competing line. We should suppose that they do constitute "stock property and franchises," and though the State cannot compel the stockholders or the purchasers to build the road, it should have the power to declare the whole forfeited to the State for violation of law in the attempted sale, and to sell it out again to the highest bidder who will complete it. The Democratic Convention has had the political sagacity to denounce this attempt and to commend the proceeding of the Governor and Attorney General to prevent its consummation, while the Republican Convention had the unwisdom to refuse to make any utterance on the subject. That party which shows the greatest promptitude in compelling the great corporations to act as servants, not masters, of the people will have the popular vote in the near future; and the Democracy are ahead of the Republicans on this issue.

A Hopeful Outlook.

GENERAL STRENGTHENING OF THE DEMOCRATIC LINE.

WHAT THE DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE HAS DONE, AND EXPECTS TO DO—THE INDEPENDENT MOVEMENT.

A Philadelphia dispatch says:

There has been a marked improvement in the Democratic situation and a general strengthening all along the line there during the past few days. The efforts of the Ohio election have not only entirely passed away, but the reaction has come earlier and with more force than was expected. This is no doubt in great measure due to the recent manifestations of organized and effective opposition to Quay and Rowan from the Republicans. There is now at work there an efficient anti-Quay Republican Association, which is spreading broadcast its address against the Ring Republican nominee and is mailing to every corner of the State copies of his offensive record. Another organization, largely made up of old members of the Committee of One Hundred and influential Republicans, is raking Rowan fore and aft, and these two organizations working separately, but not without sympathy, will supply the 20,000 Independent Republicans of that city with the facilities to cut the offensive candidates very deeply on election day. Full tickets of both parties, with a complete set of Democratic stickers will be put into every house before election day. It is estimated that in that city alone the names of 8,000 Republicans in sympathy with the anti-Quay movement are reported, and the number over the State is double these figures. Thousands of others will remain at home in disgust.

But the best aspect in the situation there is the new life which has seized upon the Democratic organization. State and City Committees, clubs and ward organizations are now working heartily and sympathetically together for a common end. Bickerings and dissensions, growling and dissatisfaction have ceased, and each organization seems to be trying to surpass the other in zeal for the cause.

The Young Men's Democratic Association, the Battalion, which did so much to elect Colonel Decheri, the Americus Club, the James Page Library Association and othe associations with a membership extending over the whole city, all have campaign committees, which have been consolidated for general work, and are at it in full harmony with the City and State Committees. The opening and ratification meeting at Horticultural Hall was presided over by George W. Biddle and ex-Governor Curtin. Secretary of State Stenger, Robert E. Monaghan, John R. Read and other well known Democrats will speak. This will be followed by a great meeting this week under the auspices of the clubs. It will be held on the same night with the Irish Parnell demonstration in the Academy of Music, and Governor Pattison and Hon. Samuel J. Randall, speakers at the Irish meeting, are expected to go there to address the young Democrats. Geo. M. Dallas, Chairman Hensel and others will be on the bills. The Independents will rally on the following Saturday night with such well known speakers to the front as Tom Marshall, John Field, George D. McCreary, Francis B. Reeves and others whose voices and efforts have so often been influential in reform movements there.

At all the Committee headquarters the work of thorough organization is being pushed with unwonted activity. The Chairman of the Democratic State Committee reports that the demand for political pamphlets and reading matter has never been so great within his experience, and nearly a million copies of these, many of them eight-page publications have been printed. They cover a wide range of topics and are mostly in exposition of the issues presented by the platform. About one hundred thousand biographies of Mr. Conrad B. Day, with the tributes of Republican newspapers to his high character, have circulated, together with tracts on every phase of the Constitutional and corporation questions, the record of Quay, the pardon brokerage, riot bill lobbying, State Treasury mismanagement, some 40,000 lithograph and autograph letters, tickets by the million and hundreds of thousands of stickers have been called for and are being sent out; and though the finances of the committee are somewhat straitened the work is being pushed with energy and completeness.

From nearly every county there are recent favorable reports, which show that the revival of Democratic hopes and party activity is by no means local. The number of Republicans who openly manifest their opposition to Quay is increasing, and the prospect of a full Democratic poll is brightening everywhere.

Gov. Hoyt on his own Ex-Secretary of State.

Pennsylvanians of all shades of party feeling cannot forget the sense of burning shame that overwhelmed them when a few days before the election of 1882 Governor Hoyt, with a courage worthy of the situation, penned the following:

"When I reflect upon the humiliation attempted to be put upon myself as chief-magistrate for resisting some of the purposes of an irksome domination which puts politics above administrative propriety; and when I recur to the force of the insulting methods applied to myself by means of threats intrigue and bad faith, I realize the regrets of Cardinal Woolsey that he had not served God with half the zeal he served his king. In the name of decency, and in behalf of my successor, I wish to emphasize the curse of the whole business, and send a note of warning to the whole people. Self-respect compels me to this avowal."

As soon as that letter was given to the public Matthew S. Quay resigned the office of secretary of the Commonwealth. As the manipulator of the pardon of the riot bill bribers and the head of the corrupt treasury ring, Gov. Hoyt's cold steel was too much for him. This is the man who has the audacity now to ask the people for a vindication of his blistered official life!

Pension Office Romances.

HOW THE GOVERNMENT IS CHEATED BY MANY BOGUS CLAIMANTS.

A good many romantic stories are coming out of the Pension Office savoring of cunning fraud. One of the latest is that two families have been recently united through conflicting applications. In one case a Connecticut widow applied for a pension and the records show that the man on whose account she claimed it was himself drawing the pension through the California agency. When informed of it she asked his address declaring that she had mourned him as dead for twenty years. Another case of a similar character reverses the tale, the supposed widow having drawn the pension of her husband who had disappeared. When he applied the facts came out. this last case the man had applied in 1868, but he had not been heard of again until recently, the alleged widow having in the meantime applied and proved her claim.

The probability is that a very large fraud is at the bottom of these Pension Office romances. It has from time to time been discovered that information as to pensions, back pay and bounty has been given out in the Washington offices, where the records show that no applicant has been made or where the applicant has not been heard from for many years, the data being furnished whereon to base a successful bogus claim. The bogus claimant is usually the tool of some swindling claim agent, who is the confederate outside. These agents make the testimony fit the case and usually do so with comparative impunity, as the real claimant rarely turns up. The Connecticut soldier drawing his pension in California is not easily detected, unless a widow or the same soldier turns up somewhere else with a claim.

There are a good many such "romances" on file in the Second Auditor's office. Some are more extraordinary than those given out at the Pension Office. A widow conflicting with her husband (dead by affidavit) is a mild case. They involve such startling factors as two or three identical soldiers, two or three mothers of the same soldier, several only sisters, two fathers, etc. A romance of a soldier who died, leaving a couple of widows, three mothers and two fathers to mourn his loss and scramble for his back pay, bounty and pension and, to add to the departmental dilemma, suddenly comes to life and puts in his own personal application is none too strong for the Second Auditor's office.

Lincoln's Assassin.

JOHN WILKES BOOTH AGAIN DECLARED TO BE ALIVE.

A HIGHLY IMPROBABLE TALE NARRATED BY A GENTLEMAN OF ALABAMA, WHO CLAIMS THAT HE HAS PROOF.

A gentleman of Birmingham, Ala., will soon have published a book which he has written, giving a complete history of the life of John Wilkes Booth, incidents of the killing of Lincoln, and where Booth went after the killing, together with positive proof that he is alive to-day. The author is able to produce letters with documents of different kinds, bearing the postmark of Cairo, Egypt, Japan and other foreign points, besides photographs of Booth in different costumes.

Producing a letter bearing an Egyptian postmark, he said:

"That letter is from J. Wilkes Booth, that proves beyond the shadow of a doubt the fact that he is alive and well this moment.

"The night of the shooting Booth had hired an Irishman to impersonate him for $1,000. The man had a horse outside waiting, and when Booth left the Opera House he mounted the animal and was taken across Etnacosta Creek. There the two men changed clothes, and Booth, disguised as an Irishman, returned to Washington. The statement that Booth broke his leg when he jumped is not true. No one has ever seen the corpse with a broken leg. The night after the shooting Booth slipped into the foundry of the Sculptor Mills and slept. The next morning he was on the street, disguised as a common Irish laborer.

"He spent a week in the city, and was posted all about the excitement and what was done to catch him. When in the barn, Harold, who was on the inside, shouted to Boston Corbett that Booth was not in the barn, and the man who looked like him was only playing a part. Stanton knew it was not Booth when he paid over the $1,000 reward, for he secured a portion of the money. The next heard of Booth he was in Leavenworth, Kan., where he got on a big spree. He next turned up in Memphis, Tenn., where he was arrested for being drunk. I was in Memphis at the time, and the papers all printed the fact. He was allowed to escape. He went to New Orleans in disguise. From there he went to Paris and impersonated a Frenchman. He went to Japan and made himself known to the American legation which fact can be substantiated by General Richard Hubbard, minister there.

"Booth is now in the service of the Khedive of Egypt and owns over 100 camels. In my book I will produce a remarkable letter from Andrew Johnson showing that Booth did make his escape. I will also show letters giving the adventures of Booth since he left the United States.

Railroad Discrimination.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION REFUSES TO ACT IN THE MATTER.

At the meeting of the Republican state convention in Harrisburg, July 8, the Republican party placed itself on record when Senator Emery presented the following which was referred to the committee on resolutions:

"Resolved, That the Republicans of Pennsylvania demand the prompt and complete enforcement of the constitutional provisions prohibiting railroad discrimination."

When the resolution was read in the committee Chris Magee promptly remarked: "Well, now we'll soon get rid of that."

And they did.

Cyrus Elder made a speech against it.

"I am well aware this is a vexed question," said Senator Emery in advocacy of the resolution - "it has vexed the party since 1868 in the national convention. The wail comes up from the Atlantic to the Pacific asking for aid in this matter. The national convention at Chicago, of which I was a member, spoke of it. You can no longer dodge this question. I do wish to bring it before the people of the state of Pennsylvania, for the Democratic governor of the state has spoken of it in his message. I understand that there will be a special session of the legislature next January to consider anti-discrimination and apportionment bills. The time will come when it will be a partisan issue. The wisdom of the constitutional convention placed a clause in the constitution, then why, as loyal citizens, should we not enforce the action of the constitution. It is a question we cannot dodge. What I say in regard to the Democrats is true. They intend to put it into their platform, and we should meet them. I know the question is a difficult one. A well-known gentleman said to me recently: 'This question must be met, and the transportation companies should get together as soon as possible and agree upon something.'"

Magee renewed his objections, and the resolution to declare for the enforcement of the constitution was indefinitely postponed by a viva voce vote.

Four Little Coffins.

JOHN HOWELL'S MURDERED BABES BURIED IN ONE GRAVE.

EACH DEAD LITTLE ONE SHOWN TO THE MUDEROUS AND SUICIDAL ONE THEN PLACED IN ITS COFFIN—HOWELL HIMSELF LIKELY TO RECOVER.

SUSQUEHANNA, Oct. 25,—The joint funeral of the four murdered Howell children took place this afternoon. The scene at the little farm house, three miles from Starruca, was one to affect the hardest heart. The four little bodies were stretched out upon a table in a room adjoining that in which the wounded father lay. Before being put in the little coffins that had just arrived, they were carried one by one into their father's presence, he having expressed a wish to see them. He showed no emotion until the boy, his little Dennis, the last to be shown him, was brought in, when a gleam of suffering intelligence seemed to pass over his face. They were then placed in their coffins and put into the hearses, two in each, and the funeral wound down through the sinuous Starruca Valley to the little hamlet nestled among the hills, where the services were to be held.

There in the Methodist Church, the Rev. Mr Remsen, a Baptist clergyman, of Aldenville, Wayne County, who had made the Howells husband and wife, preached a touching sermon to a crowd gathered from far and near to the number of 1000. His text was "Suffer little children to come unto me." The four little coffins that had been carried into the church by eight little lads and little girls, playmates of the dead children, stood in a row in front of the pulpit and at the close of the sermon the large crowd of plain country folk passed slowly by, gazing at the waxen faces of the murdered little ones. Many tears fell, and mothers clasped their own darlings closer to their breasts, shuddering at the dreadful spectacle. When all had passed by the coffins were again closed and put in the hearses and the cortege moved on to the cemetery, where the last rites were to be performed. There the four children were buried side by side in one large grave, and the crowd silently dispersed, sad and dispirited.

Yesterday afternoon a coroner's jury rendered a verdict to the effect that Dennis, aged 11; Esther, aged 8; Fanny, aged 6, and Rose, aged 2, came to their deaths by pistol shot wounds inflicted by their father, John Howell, and that papers be issued for his arrest and served immediately after the funeral. While the funeral was taking place Howell's wounds were examined and dressed by Dr. Boatsen, who decided that they were not necessarily fatal. He will not be removed from the house in his present condition, but an officer will be detailed to watch him Though stolid, he evidently feels the enormity of his insane act, and he expressed a wish that he might not live. The shock to the mother has been so great that she does not seem to have sufficient reason left to feel the extent of her loss.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 28, 1885.

The present occupant of the White House can always be found at his place of business. During the week the whole fashionable world within reach of the Washington race course have been attending the autumn races. President Arthur could always be found there, usually in company with Attorney General Brewster. President Cleveland is known to be an admirer of horses and during the meeting of the Jockey Club, prominent men belonging to it made an effort to have him attend, but the chief executive would not be moved.

Mr. Cleveland would have liked to have visited Richmond, Va., during the past week on the occasion of the State Fair, but he was afraid that his presence might be construed as trying to influence the election in that state. After consultation with the Cabinet, the trip was abandoned. However, he will go to New York next week to vote and it is understood that he will not make any more important appointments until his return.

Much nonsense has been circulated recently concerning lack of harmony in the Cabinet, and the resignation of certain of its members is now being discussed. It is believed by persons who would be most likely to know, that the President receives the most cordial support from his Cabinet, and that their relations are not strained in any case.

Mr. Garland, who, it has been said, would withdraw from the Cabinet, likes the duties of his office, and is making an excellent head of the Department of Justice. It may be interesting to know how he looks upon his future politically. He said: "The office of Attorney General came to me unsolicited. The President sought me: neither my friends nor I sought him. When I accepted, I determined to make as good an Attorney General as I could. When I left the Senate my future politically ended. When I leave this office, I will go to my home in Arkansas, and I will never again participate in politics."

The presence of Senator John Sherman in this city was made the occasion of a serenade at the Ebbitt House. A sufficient sum was raised by the faithful Ohioans who did not go home to vote to pay for the music and a little crowd of about 200 people gathered to listen to a cheap melody and still cheaper eloquence of the tall, angular Senator, who came out and flaunted the bloody shirt vigorously. He said, near the close of his speech, that he was on his way to Virginia. "Yes," said a bystander, "and if you repeat there your speech of to-night you will surely elect Fitz Lee." This sally caused a good deal of laughter and applause. Senator Sherman spoke for about an hour. The purity of the ballot was his principal hobby. He declared that every national election since 1868 has been tainted with fraud and terrorism, and shaking his fist at the White House, he asserted that last year, by unlawful combination and fraud, Grover Cleveland had been elected President of the United States, when if there had been a fair vote and a fair count, James G. Blaine would have been elected.

He said many other things illustrative of his immense powers of falsehood and venom, but his declaration that Mr. Cleveland was elected by fraud is edifying, coming from a man who helped to steal the Louisiana vote for Hayes in 1876. A threat he made of reducing the representation of the South in Congress is entitled to attention merely as furnishing an insight into Mr. Sherman's purposes and hopes.

In regard to the conflicting statements about Mr. Cleveland's attitude in the New York campaign, it is known that he has all along been heartily in favor of Gov. Hill and for the election of the entire Democratic ticket. He had information from his friends in that state that Gov. Hill and his entire ticket would be elected by a large majority. His action in contributing $1,000 towards the campaign expenses is only what might have been expected of him. The President's aversion to appearing in public prints was the cause of the misunderstanding.

Mr. Cleveland holds receptions in the East Room on Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays. The attendance at them is increasing every day. Many come desiring to see the first democratic president since Buchanan. All that they ask is a handshake, and the President gives them that as a solemn duty. There are many bridal couples among his callers, who will remember the glimpse they thus catch of the President, and repeat the account of their visit to their children and grandchildren, and treasure the little ne segay he gives they as a heirloom.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming smaller by degrees, and beautifully less. I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

A CLEAR HEAD.

"One year ago I was induced to try AYER'S PILLS, as a remedy for Indigestion, Constipation, and Headache, from which I had long been a great sufferer. Commencing with a dose of Ayer's Pills, I found their action easy, and obtained prompt relief. In continuing their use, a single Pill taken after dinner, daily, has been all the medicine I have required. AYER'S PILLS have kept my system regular and my head clear, and benefited me more than all the medicines ever before, which I have in vain similarly afflicted should know the value." 152 State St., Chicago, June 6, 1882. THE RADIANT HOME BASE-BURNER.

(From the "La Crosse Democrat.")

We never had a coal stove around the house until last Saturday. Have always used pine slabs and pieces of our neighbor's fence. They burn well, too, but the fence got all burned up, and the neighbor said he wouldn't build a new one, so we went down to Jones's and got a coal stove. It is called the "Radiant Home," is manufactured by BLACK & GRAWER, of Erie, Pa., and any man that says we didn't have a radiant home at our house for about four hours last Saturday night, is a Republican and a villain. You see, we didn't know anything about coal stoves

Judge Shuman, one of Catawissa's most enterprising citizens, has laid new water pipes between the Water Company's reservoir and the springs. The Judge is interested in the water works there, as he is in every progressive movement.

John C. Yocum, Esq., of Catawissa has just won an important case by special pleading. On Wednesday afternoon he was married to Miss Fannie C. Killinger at Annville, Lebanon county. We tender our fraternal congratulations.

Persons who are expecting to have sales will consult their own interests by getting their sale bills printed at this office. For every set of bills printed here a free notice is given in the paper, the notice alone being worth as much as we charge for the bills.

The county commissioners publish a notice to tax collectors this week, requiring them to make returns of seated and unseated lands upon which no property can be found from which to make taxes, on or before January 1st. Tax collectors should read and heed it.

We are requested to state that the entertainment given at the Opera House on Tuesday evening was fixed for that date, because the services of Mrs. Crenshaw could be secured for no other evening. It was not for the purpose of getting ahead of anybody else.

The concert given on Wednesday evening by Prof. Strickland's choir and orchestra, of Danville, for the benefit of St. Columba's church, was well attended and highly appreciated. The singing was of a high order; and the execution by the orchestra was good.

There will be a meeting of the Penna. State Board of Agriculture and General Farmers Institute at Bloomsburg, Dec. 2nd and 3rd. His excellency, Gov. R. E. Pattison will preside at the Meeting. Farmers and Farmers' wives and the public generally are invited to attend and participate in the proceedings. Programme of Meeting will be published later.

Last week there was a meeting of the descendents of the Huguenots held in New York to commemorate the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes in 1685. The Bi-centennial has given occasion to many historical sermons in this country as well as in France. A sermon on the subject is to be preached in the Presbyterian church by the pastor on Sunday evening next.

Peck's Sun, published at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, is the most humorous paper in America to-day. Geo. W. Peck, its editor and proprietor stands without an equal as a humorist. He believes in making people happy, and no one can be otherwise who reads his most excellent paper. Our readers are invited to read the prospectus of Peck's Sun, in another column. Sample copies mailed free to any address.

The Washingtonville fair is in bad odor just now. After advertising very extensively that Maud S. would be there, and giving out the impression that Bonner's horse was referred to, the officers palmed off a Danville horse by the same name as the celebrated trotter. A large number of gamblers were arrested on the grounds and taken to Danville and the President of the association was also arrested for allowing gambling on the grounds.

The only alleged newspaper in Berwick is dying a horrible death. In its delirium it utters slanders and falsehoods, by the column, thinking that its insignificance will protect it from libel suits, but fondly hoping that it may be given some prominence by engaging in a controversy with respectable newspapers. Its last week's utterances are too false to require any denial, and too contemptible to receive further notice.

List of letters remaining in the Post Office at Bloomsburg for week ending Oct. 27, 1885:

GEORGE A. CLARK, P. M.

An entertainment was given at the Opera House on Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's P. E. Church. The programme consisted of recitations by Mrs. S. E. Crenshaw, a gifted elocutionist, vocal solos by Mrs. Parker of Washington, D. C., and Mr. F. P. Drinker, and instrumental music by Miss M. Drinker and Prof. Metherell's orchestra. Mrs. Parker has a well-trained voice, and the audience showed their appreciation of her singing by according her hearty encores. Though the entertainment was gotten up in great haste the proceeds will leave something for the Guild after paying expenses.

Mrs. Crenshaw is an elocutionist of no small ability and has acquired some reputation in the West. Her selections were well chosen and varied, and calculated to display her power as a finished elocutionist. She has a brilliant future before her in the profession which she has chosen.

Latest Hotel Racket.

Said a friend at our elbow last evening: "I met a couple of 'fakirs' who take in country fairs, the other day on the train, and one of them put me on the latest hotel racket. It was like this: Tom, a rather slouchy-looking fellow, goes into a hotel, pays for dinner and enters the dining-room. He is shortly afterwards followed by John, who is well dressed and wears a nobby hat, which he is careful the clerk shall see. Tom comes out, picks the new tile and leaves the hotel. Then follows John with the most disreputable hat ever seen. With blood in his eye he demands satisfaction from the hotel proprietor. He generally gets $5, divides with his partner, and they are ready to work another hotel.

ELECTION DAY, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 3rd

Hetlerville.

G. B. Swank attended the Sunday school convention of this township.

Miss Kate Crothers, of Hazleton, is visiting this place.

The township held a convention in the Evangelical Lutheran Church on Tuesday last the 27th for the benefit of the Sunday Schools.

Messrs. Adam Miller and D. C. Bond are running opposition against O. Swank and J. Wagner with threshing machines.

Mr. C. P. Harpster claims he can beat in threshing. He threshes 40 bushels of wheat in an hour, but O. Swank & J. Wagner beat them; they can thresh 60 bushels in an hour.

The Problem Solved.

Fishingcreek Oct. 26, 1885.

MR. EDITOR.—The following is a solution of the question in mental arithmetic in your last issue of the COLUMBIAN.

By the first condition of the question the first boy sold his apples at the rate of ½ cent each, and the second boy sold his at ⅓ cent each; together the two apples were sold for ½ plus⅓ which equals 5-6 of a cents and one apple brought ½ of 5-6 which equals 5-12 of a cent.

By the second condition of the question the boy that sold the sixty apples received 2-5 of a cent each which was a loss of the difference between 5-12 and 2-5 which equals 1-60 of a cent on each apple, and on sixty apples he lost sixty times 1-60 which equals 60-60 or one cent.

B. L. KRAMER.

Catawissa.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN:

DEAR SIR:—Your correspondent from Catawissa in the COLUMBIAN of the 23rd inst. reports a Prohibition meeting held in the open streets of Catawissa on Saturday the 17th, of Oct., and thinks that "the proper place for ministers is in the pulpit, and not making political speeches." But how about their work down in the ditch where the drunkand lies stripped of manhood and money, his character and home destroyed by drink? Have ministers a right to lift up the drunkard, and restore to him his character and home, and no right to tell the people how nor where that drunkard was manufactured, or suggest the method by which that factory shall be closed? If not—why not? A clergyman is a citizen as well as a minister, and has a legitimate right to speak his mind on any question that affects the morals, the intelligence and happiness of the people, whether he be in the pulpit or out of it. If ministers have no right to discuss the science of government (Politics) as well as lawyers and judges, and other good citizens, they have no right to go to the polls and vote, because "their place is in the pulpit," and of course to be seen at an election is highly disreputable to ministers, hence they have no right to express their opinions as citizens in support of free thought, free speech and a free ballot. Your correspondent had probably better write a work on "Advice to Ministers," but by all means let the price be as low as the advice is thin.

Mifflin Township S. S. Convention.

The Mifflin Township Sunday School Convention was held in the New School Lutheran church, Mifflinville, Columbia county, Pa., Tuesday, October 27, 1885.

Rev. Hassinger was elected president; W. T. S. Deavor, Sec'y and J. F. Brown, treasurer. The superintendents of the township were appointed executive committee. This was the first Sunday school convention held in this township.

A number of the most difficult questions arising from Sunday school work were ably discussed by the following ministers and laymen: Rev. Galloway, of Berwick, Rev. Ferguson and Dechant, of Catawissa, Rev. Hassinger and Deavor, of Mifflinville, Messrs. A. W. Spear, of Lightstreet, Deacon Kirkendall, of Nescopeck, and Burd Clayburger, of Mifflinville. All the Sunday schools were represented but one. The exercises of the day were very interesting and from the attendance and attention, we would judge that much good was accomplished, and would reasonably expect great improvement in the Sunday school work of the township. A collection, amounting to $4.04, was raised to defray incidental expenses.

The evening session was most interesting. Two very important topics, namely, "How Can Parents Best Aid the Sunday School?" and "The Sunday School as a Means of Grace," were ably discussed. The former by Rev. Ferguson, the latter, in a like manner, by Rev. Galloway. Some very important questions from the query box were answered by members of the convention. Some closing remarks were made by ministers and several laymen, after which the convention adjourned "sine die."

W. T. S. DEAVOR, Sec'y.

A Season of Prayer.

ITS ORIGIN AND HOW IT IS OBSERVED EVERY YEAR.

The week commencing Sunday, November 8, will be observed throughout the civilized world as a season of prayer for young men and Young Men's Christian Associations

This season had its origin in a resolution adopted by the International Convention of the American associations held in Albany, N. Y., in 1866, and has been observed every year since at the recommendation of the subsequent conventions.

There are now 2,900 of these associations in the world, distributed as follows: North America, 934; Great Britain, 503; France, 72; Germany, 549; Holland, 396; Switzerland, 268; Denmark, 43; Belgium, 24, and a dozen, more or less, in each of the following countries: Spain, Italy, Turkey, Russia, Austria, Japan, Syria, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, Madagascar and India. The American associations are the strongest and best organized of any. They number 629 general associations, 190 college, 69 railroad, 34 colored and 12 German. The yearly current expenses of the associations in America amount to $750,000. They own eighty-two buildings, valued a $3,532,000, and have a total net property of $4,353,000. Four hundred and fifteen men are devoting their whole time to the work as secretaries, librarians and gymnasium instructors.

The expenses of the railroad associations is $75,000 per year, two-thirds of which sum is contributed by the railroad companies, who testify to the great benefit resulting to their employees through this special department of the Y. M. C. A. work. Last year 1,700 young men professed conversion in the college associations. There are thirty-one State and Provincial organizations, each with its executive committee and annual convention. These committees expended last year in their work $32,034. Their International Committee, located in New York City in 1866, and continued there ever since, is the the executive committee of the international conventions which meet biennially. It consists of thirty-three members, nine advisory members and fifteen trustees, representing all parts of the United States and the Dominion of Canada. It employs ten secretaries, whose duty it is to visit all parts of the two countries, advising with and counseling associations both State and local. The expenses of the committee for last year were $30,496, which amount was contributed by friends of the cause.

Roaringcreek.

The public schools of this township open next Monday.

Mrs. Francis Beck was visiting friends in Shamokin last week.

Mrs. Dan'l Houck still remains in very critical condition; at times suffering intensely.

Rev. Hamlin will soon begin a protracted effort at the Roaringcreek brick church.

Chas. L. Pfahler "took in" the Washingtonville fair last week. He reports a good time.

O. W. Cherington, of Mill Grove, L. H. Daniels, of Numedia, and W. B. Snyder of this place, were in Philadelphia last week.

Band practice every Tuesday evening and singing school every Friday evening keeps a little stir in our ancient village.

Rev. J. G. W. Herold, the U. B. minister has been returned to this (the Catawissa) circuit; he has made many warm friends here.

Britton Hughes, Esq., formerly of Slabtown who for some time past has been firing on the P. & R. at Newberry has been changed to Catawissa.

Rev. W. S. Hamlin M. E. pastor and wife celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding aniversary the evening of the 16th inst. Some forty guests were present all enjoying the occasion.

A great many people will contract large doctor bills or dose themselves with quinine which injures the system without reaching the seat of disease. Keller's Catarrh Remedy will positively effect a speedy cure.

Benton.

Those of our town who went to Washingtonville fair expecting to see Maud S. were sadly left.

Dave and Charles Gibson, typos, from Williamsport are the guests of their brother Boyd.

A. L. McHenry left Tuesday for Pittsburgh where he purposes to engage in business.

John Fowler, of Pine Summit was noticed in town Tuesday.

The colt race at the recent fair seems to have caused much dissatisfaction. Perhaps if the Robbins colt had not been worn out previous to the race there would not have been any cause for a wrangle. If the decision of the judges is to be questioned we ask why have judges at all?

The new addition or rather Post Office is rapidly approaching completion and ere long our present Post Master will be peering into his box and will ask instead of being asked for his mail.

J. J. McHenry returned from Philadelphia with a very large stock of goods. Every department is filled and people are embracing the opportunity of securing goods at low prices.

Sam Ikeler and John Krickbaum spent Sunday last in Berwick.

Alfred C. McHenry purchased the handsome New England organ exhibited at the fair by Filly & Williams, of Pittston. Boyd McHenry, landlord, purchased also an excellent organ from the same firm.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt spent last week in Kingston and Dallas.

Foxes and rabbit are reported exceedingly scarce, snow will start them.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE

COD LIVER OIL, WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES,

For Wasting Children.

Dr. S. W. COHEN, of Waco, Texas, says: "I have used your Emulsion in infantile wasting, with good results. It not only restores wasted tissue, but gives strength, and I heartily recommend it for diseases attended by atrophy."

East Benton.

Minor R. Smith's dwelling with contents except on first floor and cellar, was entirely consumed by fire on last Tuesday evening. It was partially covered by insurance.

Turnpike street, Cambra, presents a beautiful and imposing appearance since the completion of the new buildings. All the dwellings, including the Christian chapel are models of modern architectural art. Cambra is a handsome country town.

Mrs. Judge Krickbaum thinks some one has disposed of her churn dog.

Mr. John Asheiman has commenced a new house at the crossroad on the lower end of his farm.

Rev. H. K. Binkly, agent for the Publication Board of the Reformed Church, Philadelphia, preached at St. James on last Sunday. His sermon was divided into English and German.

Reuben Gibbons has already husked a piece of corn and hauled in the fodder.

Mr. Samuel Yost is four score years old and walks regularly to church a distance of half a mile. He was also at the Benton fair.

Several women of our neighborhood have been complaining of late. We believe they are just commencing false teething.

Jacob Wenner, of Bendertown, is improving and slowly recovering from his rheumatic complaint.

No foot-hold on Mr. Buckhorn's apple conundrum. The string seems a penny shorter when not double d up.

Prothonotary Snyder, E. R. Ikeler, Esq., Charles Savage, of Bloomsburg, Harry Low, of Orangeville, and Alibach, of Arizona, who is home on a visit, arrived at Cambra this (Tuesday) evening and stopped with C. L. Low, proprietor of the Temperance house preparatory for a fox hunt on the following day (Wednesday). After they are through we expect that foxes will be scarce. They are a jovial set and we apprehend that they will frighten the foxes considerably. Plenty of hunters the "coon" and "fox" will have to "git." I hope they will report "lots" of foxes Wanamaker's.

PHILADELPHIA, October, 26, 1885.

It is high time to speak of that part of furniture in which our taking the lead is a matter of comparatively recent date.

It is tolerably well known that all the resources of furniture-making are ours as much as if they were under our roof; and that here is gathered a more inclusive collection of proper wood-work of every grade than there is in all Philadelphia together besides. So that, whatever wealth or poverty seeks, here is the place to find it, surrounded by similar things that ought to be seen before a choice is made

It is tolerably well known too what our system of trade is—fair trade is the shortest name for it. We consider what we ought to sell an article for and mark it so that everybody can read it, while the prevailing practice is to mark with secret signs—what is the secrecy for? So that the seller can gauge his price by the buyer, his knowledge, his conceit, his vanity, his money tact, his money. The price of furniture is generally made from a study of human nature. Everybody knows it and guards against it by going about from store to store, comparing and haggling. And yet nine-tenths of the stores—perhaps ninety-nine in a hundred—stick to their crooked ways. A common trick is to sell some article very low indeed, so low as to fasten the buyer. He pays enough before he gets through.

It is well enough known that nothing of that sort happens here. But haggling has a certain fascination when the money amounts to much. Wholesale trade consists almost entirely of haggling. Houses, horses, carriages, pianos are sold by haggling—why not furniture? Banking, dealing in masses of money itself consists of haggling. The Stock Exchange is the biggest haggling-machine in the world. To the poor the little sums they pay for daily use are big. The business of almost all the little local stores is done by haggling.

The world is not so full of haggling without some reason. Haggling has its advantages. Here we are, our prices just so—no more, no less. A dealer outside can ask more for his things; and then, if his customer happens to know our prices, he can drop—he would rather make a very little profit than nothing. Hence elastic prices and haggling. We have only one defence. We have got to have better things and deal with generosity. That is our only way to beat a townful of hagglers.

Excuse the digression. It was needful to state with some fulness what you know in a shadowy way and act as if you didn't know at all.

The part of our furniture stock you haven't had the chance to know the state of so well is upholstered work, mantels, tables, chairs, cabinets, easels, book-cases, desks for house and office—all those difficult wares to manage well because of the number of forms they come in, the room they require, the skill in choosing, the knowing where to go on and where to stop.

Upholstered work is mostly out of sight. Vast sums of money in it. Somebody has got to be trusted. There must be a way to be sure of the maker. It belongs to us to be sure. It belongs to you to trust. Another day, perhaps, we'll tell you how we know the inside of these things. You see here a long array of sofas and chairs not only upholstered, but actually covered with costly stuffs. A roomful besides of the stuffs. It isn't common to buy these things with any sense of sureness. The softness and spring may come of something else than steel and curled hair. They may flatten out in a twelvemonth. In the higher range of upholstery your are scarcely willing to buy by what you can see and feel.

The more difficult part is the getting together of shapes enough and styles enough; for all this getting has got to be paid for. The things of last year must be gone. A swift current of trade makes everything easy.

How many shapes of tables and chairs, do you think? We could fill this building no two alike. Of all the crooked ways of putting pieces of wood together the table-maker seems to have discovered most; the chair-maker next; the cabinet-maker not far behind.

In short we have a ready-made stock of furniture, much of it such as people pay twice-over for having it made to order; and we make to order besides.

Some may get the impression that we deal in nothing but costly wares. By no means. The humbler wares are not so various. A little space is enough for them. This acre or more is mostly filled with costly work; but the plainest of things are here.

We should be ashamed to have this store a less good place for the things of the poor than, for those of the rich. Was it made by the rich? Could it live by the rich? Are there so many rich in this comfortable city of ours as to fill such a store as this? It's an everybody's store. We hope the time when we shall really need to advertise for the trade of the poor is very far off indeed.

We have every sort of furniture a poor man can buy; and we sell it so that he needn't get into the hands of sharpers.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

A man attacked with Bright's disease, or any kidney disease, don't want fine words—but its conqueror Hunt's [kidney and liver] Remedy.

Pure blood is absolutely necessary in order to enjoy perfect health. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood and strengthens the system.

We must tell of the great specific—Hunt's [kidney and liver] Remedy. It never fails to cure diabetes, dropsy, Bright's disease, &c.

The secret art of beauty lies not in cosmetics, but is only in pure blood and a healthy performance of the vital functions, which can be obtained by using Burdock Blood Bitters.

The powerful curative properties of a Hop Plaster are irresistible when applied to backache, swollen joints and muscles, sciatica, pleurisy, sharp pains, or any sort of soreness. The best and strongest porous plaster made. A trial will demonstrate it. 25c.

Rheumatism and similar diseases, caused by a low state of the system, are cured by using Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

AFTER DIPHTHERIA.

Diphtheria is a terrible disease, requiring the greatest medical skill to effect a complete cure. Even when its power is broken it clings to the patient with great persistency, and often leaves the system poisoned and prostrated. Just here Hood's Sarsaparilla does a vast amount of good, expelling impurities from the blood, giving it richness and vitality, while it renovates and strengthens the system.

CELEBRATED WINE PRODUCT OF NEW JERSEY.

The best wine in the country, that received the highest premium at the Centennial, is Speer's Port Grape Wine which has become a celebrated product of New Jersey. This wine and his P. J. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria,

By accident a man swallows a poison. How frightened he is. How the house antidotes are sent down after it, and in what glowing terms the messenger hurries along the doctor. Yet hosts of excellent people are slowly dying of poisonous elements in their blood. The liver should have removed these, but it is weak and diseased, and so fails of its duty. Do you understand this fact? If so, you will be glad to learn that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cures liver complaint.

SYMPTOMS.

Slight pain in the side, the skin and eyes assume a thick yellow coat, digestion is impaired, an unpleasant sinking sensation at the pit of the stomach is experienced; the bowels are irregular, the mind fretful, the memory weakened, sometimes a slight cough, coldness of the hands and feet, sometimes loss of appetetite and at others unnatural craving for food, dizziness of the head, blurring before the eyes, depressed spirits, bad breath, feeling of uncertainty of having left something undone but can't tell what it is. Take Simmons Liver Regulator(it will remove all these feelings and make you well.

With bright eyes and elastic step, yet gray, lusterless hair. It is unnatural, needless. Parker's Hair Balsam will restore the black or brown premsturely lost, cleanse from all dandruff, and stop its falling. Don't surrender your hair without an effort to save it Oct 9-4w

A Complication of Diseases is the decision of incompetent physicians when a patient has been "killed by drugs." Yes; a complication, indeed, originating in indigestion, dyspepsia, kidney or liver complaint, all of which yield as readily to Vinegar Bitters as does the autumn leaf to the gentle breeze. Complications are quickly solved by the Bitters.

Thousands of Able Men Fail in Life for purely physical reasons. They are not torpid but their liver is, and the liver blocks the way. They are bilious, yellow skinned, headachy and miserable, all because that great gland declines to do its work. The medicine that can restore to this organ its natural power will add one hundred per cent. to the available force of this world. We know of but one thing able to do this—Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

"Malaria," as a "popular ailment," has given place to a new potentate.

If you have rheumatism now, the medical wiseacres exclaim — "Uric Acid!"

If you have frequent headaches, they sagely remark—"Uric Acid!"

If you have softening of the brain, they insist that it is—"Uric Acid!"

If sciatica or neuralgia make life miserable, it is—"Uric Acid!"

If your skin breaks out in boils and pimples, it is—"Uric Acid!"

If you have abscesses and piles, "Uric Acid" has set your blood on fire.

If you have dull, languid feelings, backache, kidney or bladder troubles, gout, gravel, poor blood: are ill at ease, threatened with paralysis or apoplexy, vertigo; are bilious, dropsical, constipated or dyspeptic—"Uric Acid" is the key to the situation, the cause of all your difficulties!

We do not know as madam malaria will take kindly to this masculine usurper, but he has evidently come to stay.

"Uric Acid,"—this monster, is the product of the decomposition—death—constantly taking place within us, and unless he is every day routed from the system, through the kidneys, by means of some great blood specific like Warner's safe cure, which Senator B. K. Bruce says snatched him from its grasp, there is not the least doubt but that it will utterly ruin the strongest human constitution!

It is not a young fellow by any means. It has a long and well known line of ancestors. It is undoubtedly the father of a very great family of diseases, and though it may be the fashion to ascribe progeny to it that are not directly its own, there can be little doubt that if it once gets thoroughly seated in the human system, it really does introduce into it most of the ailments now, per force of fashion, attributed to its baleful influence.

Beware of Smart Young Men.

Three panics have been caused by three young men, two of whom were less than thirty years of age; each was the son of a minister, who had forgotten the God of his father. One was a banker, one was a broker and one a confidential clerk. Two died homeless and penniless, in self-exile and one is now in jail. At the age of 22 he was a bank president. The bank was a success. His personal speculations brought him large returns. The venerable directors encouraged him in his career. He was esteemed a wonder in the financial world; but his aged father, the retired clergyman, trembled for the future of his son. When the young banker had accumulated $200,000, he begged him to be content and stop. But the son was sure he could make a million. Temptations multiplied. Honesty was suspended, the golden bubble burst, detection followed, the young banker fled from home and died a penniless stranger in a strange land. His life story, with a few circumstantial variations, is the story of the confidential clerk. The final story of the third is yet to be told.

Let us be wary of the smart young man. How consummate are his personal attractions. His address is pleasant. His imagination is his faculty. He is a most persuasive conversationalist. Listen to him, and the false seems true and the fiction real. Success attends his early ventures. He is envied, petted, courted, feasted, trusted. He handles millions.

THE ROYAL BAKER AND PASTRY COOK.—A royal addition to the kitchen library. It contains over seven hundred receipts pertaining to the culinary department, including baking, roasting, preserving, soups, cakes, jellies, pastry, and all kinds of sweetmeats, with receipts for the most delicious candies, cordials, beverages, and all other necessary knowledge for the chef de cuisine of the most exacting epicure, as well as for the more modest housewife, who desires to prepare for her lord and master a repast that shall be both wholesome and economical. With each receipt is given full and explicit directions for putting together, manipulating, shaping, baking, and kind of utensils to be used, so that a novice can go through the operation with success; while a special and important feature is made of the mode of preparing all kinds of food and delicacies for the sick. The book has been prepared under the direction of Prof. Rudmani, late chef of the New York Cooking school, and is the most valuable of the recent editions upon the subject of cookery that has come to our notice. It is gotten up in the highest style of the printers art, on illuminated covers, etc. We are assured that every can of the "Royal Baking Powder" contains an order for one of these valuable books.

Special Delivery Problems.

WASHINGTON, October 23.

The special delivery system so recently inaugurated has not proved such a success as its originators expected of it. Several problems have arisen which puzzle the Department. In the first place, the law authorizing the service made no provision for its support in cities where it did not support itself. The Department found itself in many cases powerless to carry out its own advertised scheme. From many small towns where the full delivery does not obtain the reports come that nobody could be found to deliver the special letters for the money there was in them. As there were no regular carriers in such towns no way out of the difficulty was found until it was suggested by an Indiana postmaster that his assistant in the office be allowed to deliver such letters and collect the revenue therefrom. The Postoffice Department to-day has decided that where such assistants were hired by the Postmaster this might be done, but that no official appointed by the government could be allowed to add to his salary in this way. Unless the Postmaster or his assistant will undertake to run about town and deliver special letters in person for nothing, there will be a good many officers where the blockade will exist.

In the opinion of legal officers the government is liable for any damage which may arise from the non-delivery of letters prepaid at the special rates, the same as a telegraph company is liable for the non-delivery of a dispatch. The obligation on the part of the government is stronger, owing to the fact that it enters into a special contract for the additional ten cents to deliver the letter immediately in certain specified cities. The department understands this and feels considerable embarrassment.

A Parisian manufacturer has produced a paper piano, the compressed material for the case taking a perfect polish. The tone of the instrument, though not loud, is said to be very sweet, a soft, full, quasi continuous sound, somewhat resembling that of an organ.

At Blunt, Dakota Territory, natural gas has been found at a depth of 142 feet.

J. H. Mercer would especially recommend to the ladies Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets. As a laxative they have no equal. They are guaranteed to cure Chronic Constipation, Dyspepsia, and all diseases arising from a deranged stomach. With a free use of the Tablets, Sick Headache is impossible.

J. H. Mercer wishes to state that he has at last found an article he can sell on its merits. It is with pleasure he guarantees to the public Acker's English Remedy as a sure and never failing cure for Asthma, Coughs, Whooping Cough, Croup, and all Lung Troubles. It is the standard remedy for Consumption. I have never found its equal.

Best Temperance Bitters Known.

VINEGAR BITTERS

VEGETABLE — FREE FROM — ALCOHOL

PURELY — CALIFORNIA

Dr. WALKER'S — EUREKA

VINEGAR BITTERS

No other medicine known so effectually purges the blood of deep-seated diseases.

Millions bear testimony to its wonderful curative effects.

It is a purely Vegetable Preparation, made from the native herbs and roots of California, the medicinal properties of which are extracted therefrom without the use of Alcohol.

It removes the cause of disease, and the patient recovers his health.

It is the great Blood Purifier and Life-giving Principle; a Gentle Purgative and Tonic; a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the system. Never before in the history of the world has a medicine been compounded possessing the power of VINEGAR BITTERS in healing the sick of every disease man is heir to.

The Alterative, Aperient, Diaphoretic, Carminative, Nutritious, Laxative, Sedative, Counter-Irritant, Sudorific, Anti-Bilious, Solvent, Diuretic and Tonic properties of VINEGAR BITTERS exceed those of any other medicine in the world.

No person can take the BITTERS according to directions and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

Bilious, Remittent, Intermittent and Malarial Fevers are prevalent throughout the United States, particularly in the valleys of our great rivers and their vast tributaries during the Summer and Autumn, especially during seasons of unusual heat and dryness.

These Fevers are invariably accompanied by extensive derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels. In their treatment, a purgative, exerting a powerful influence upon these organs, is absolutely necessary.

There is no cathartic for the purpose equal to Dr. J. WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS, as it will speedily remove the dark-colored viscid matter with which the bowels are loaded, at the same time stimulating the secretions of the liver, and generally restoring the healthy functions of the digestive organs.

Fortify the body against disease by purifying all its fluids with VINEGAR BITTERS. No epidemic can take hold of a system thus forearmed.

It Invigorates the Stomach and stimulates the torpid Liver and Bowels, cleansing the blood of all impurities, imparting life and vigor to the frame, and carrying off without the aid of Calomel, or other minerals, all poisonous matter from the system. It is easy of administration, prompt in action, and certain in its results.

Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Pneumonia, Dizziness, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are at once relieved by VINEGAR BITTERS.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, the Bitters have no equal. In these, as in all constitutional Diseases, WALKER'S VINEGAR BITTERS has shown its great curative powers in the most obstinate and intractable cases.

Mechanical Diseases.—Persons engaged in Paints and Minerals, such as Plumbers, Type-setters, Gold-beaters, and Miners, as they advance in life, are subject to Paralysis of the Bowels. To guard against this, take occasional doses of VINEGAR BITTERS.

Skin Diseases, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Ulcers, Swellings, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-worms, Scald-head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations, Humors and diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of the Bitters.

Pin, Tape and other Worms, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. No system of medicine, no vermifuges, no anthelmintics, will free the system from worms like VINEGAR BITTERS.

Measles, Scarlet Fever, Mumps, Whooping Cough, and all children's diseases may be made less severe by keeping the bowels open with mild doses of the Bitters. This wonderful remedy is especially adapted to the systems of children, for purifying herbs alone give it its remarkable curative powers. It contains no alcohol, opium or other poison.

For Female Complaints, in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or the turn of life, this Bitters has no equal.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood when its impurities burst through the skin in Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul; your feelings will tell you when, and the health of the system will follow.

In conclusion: Give the Bitters a trial. It will speak for itself. One bottle is a better guarantee of its merits than a lengthy advertisement.

Around each bottle are full directions printed in different languages.

STONE IN KIDNEY.

EXPELLED AFTER USING DR. DAVID KENNEDY'S "FAVORITE REMEDY" ABOUT TWO WEEKS.

One of the most remarkable cases that has ever been brought to the notice of the public is that of Mr. J. S. Beach, of Stone Ridge, Ulster county, N. Y. Mr. Beach had suffered since Oct. 18, 1874, from the presence of calculus or stone in the right kidney. No less than seven physicians were employed at different times, to whom Mr. Beach paid numereds of dollars for medical treatment, with only temporary relief from his agony.

By the urgent solicitations of his friends he was induced to try Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy," and experienced a marked improvement from the first day he began to use the medicine. On the 18th of September he voided a stone as large as could be passed through the natural channel.

Mr. Beach concludes a long letter to Dr. Kennedy by saying: "It will always afford me pleasure to recommend the 'Favorite Remedy' to those who may be suffering from difficulties of the kidneys and bladder, or any disorders arising from an impure state of the blood.

WILLIAM MCKNEW, 721 PAYETTE ST., BALTIMORE, MD., says: "I believe 'Favorite Remedy' is a good medicine. It is doing me more good than anything I ever tried, and I have tried almost everything, for I am a sufferer from dyspepsia." While "Favorite Remedy" is a specific in stomach and bladder diseases, it is equally valuable in cases of bilious disorders, constipation of the bowels and all the class of ills apparently inseperable from the constitutions of women.

The Little Snakes.

A barelegged boy riding a rake on one of the divides near the Santa Fe trail dragged into the windrow a rattler; but instead of coiling and giving forth a defiant buzz, the snake manifested every inclination to get off peaceably. The average Kansas lad would have taken a strap from his harness, given the reptile two or three paralyzing taps, counted the rattles, and gone on his way before any one discovered the rake was idle. Not so did Billy Woodward, who is only a few months from County Donegal and possessed of the abundant natural curiosity of an Irish boy abroad. He got down from his high seat and began to study natural history. The snake tried to run away, but Billy "headed her off," as he said afterward. Once or twice the fugitive coiled and threatened, to the boy's great delight. For fifteen minutes the teasing went on, and then the snake darted her head into a hole in the prairie sod. Perhaps a third of her length was concealed, while there came from under ground a noise which the boy said sounded like "a queer kind of clucking." By the time he had got a trace chain loose the snake was out of the hole and wriggling slowly toward the uncut grass. Billy followed her up, "fetched her a couple cracks" and supposed the sport was over.

Later in the day a party of hunters came along and the boy exhibited his trophy, and told what he had seen. One of the hunters, a ranchman of varied experience, got out his pocket-knife, and with the remark that he guessed he could show the others something about rattlesnakes they never knew before, stooped down and drew the sharp blade across the thickest fold of the dead snake. Out squirmed eleven young rattlers, all of a size, say eight inches long and as large around as a lead pencil. They were a very lively family, and had to be laid out one at a time. Billy's eyes grew big as he saw the revelation which added the best part to his snake story. The ranchman said that when overtaken with her young the maternal rattler will, as a last means of protection, swallow the little ones. She calls them with a noise which is a combination of cluck and whistle. Very rarely does it happen that the act is witnessed. In all his experience the ranchman said he had never seen this snake-swallowing performance but once. Then he had come upon the mother snake and her young sunning among the stones. They had tried to get away, but, failing, the young had glided into the mouth of the old one in response to the peculiar call, and had disappeared before his eyes.

The Licorice Plant.

The licorice plant is found in Syria, in Western Andalusia and other parts of Spain, in Asia Minor, Greece, and is cultivated in Surrey and Yorkshire, England. It is believed that it could be successfully grown in the United States, especially in the warmer portions. It is a very important article of commerce, the import of the Root alone to the United States in 1884 amounting to 39,057,000 pounds, valued at $800,000. This is not taking into consideration the powdered licorice and the other forms in which it is sold. From the reports of American consuls in foreign lands we have recently learned many interesting facts about licorice. Stick licorice is made by crushing and grinding the root to a pulp, which is boiled in water over an open fire, and the decoction, separated from the solid residue of the root, is evaporated in copper pans till a sufficient degree of concentration is attained, after which, on cooling, it is rolled into the form of sticks or other shapes, for the market. The preparation of the juice is a widely extended industry along the Mediterranean coasts; but the quality best appreciated is made in Calabria, and sold under the name of Solazzi and Corigliano juice. The licorice grown in Yorkshire is made into a confection called Pontefract cakes. Licorice was first cultivated in England in the reign of Elizabeth. The plant, very graceful, with feathery leaves, is planted in ridges, and does not come to perfection until the fourth year. The sandy soil suits it, and the fibrous roots are sometimes ten or twelve feet deep. These are dug in Autumn, and pounded in the following Winter; the juce thus extracted is boiled down and mixed with gum arabic and other ingredients, and mixed into large cakes.

One of the best varieties of licorice grows wild in Sicily, and in parts of that island the farmers look upon it as a pest, it is so hard to subdue. The plant grows to the height of two or three feet, and bears a small flower. When the roots are taken from the earth they are bound in bundles, and upon the backs of mules transported from the fields to the factories. Here they lie in store for a time in a state of seasoning. When the roots are sufficiently cured men and women, with hatchets, cut them in bits of from three to six inches in length. These are then plunged into a vat of water and thoroughly washed. They are then crushed in a mill of rude construction. It consists of two circular stones of lava. The one is in horizontal position; the other, perpendicular, rests upon it. Through the centre of the upper stone is an axle, to which is attached a mule, which revolves it slowly in a circle (cart-wheel like) upon the lower stone. A workman with a wooden shovel is constantly employed in keeping the roots beneath the revolving stone. When the roots are sufficiently crushed they are placed with water in kettles and boiled for twenty-four hours. They are then removed from the kettles and placed beneath a screw-press, and all the juice is thoroughly squeezed out, which runs into a cistern beneath. This juice is pumped from the cistern and passed through a sieve into kettles and the boiling resumed. The sediment from the strainer is again pressed.

The contents of the boiling kettles is a second time filtered. When boiled to the proper consistency it is removed to a broad, shallow kettle over a slow fire, where workmen with spades continue to stir it until it becoms dense enough for paste. Then it is removed and placed in wooden moulds of the size they wish the cakes or by workmen worked into little rolls or sticks. When cold or hard the cakes are wrapped in paper and boxes for export.

The little rolls or sticks of licorice are placed upon shelves to dry. When they become perfectly dry and hard they are packed in laurel leaves and boxes.

In preparing the root for market women with knives scrape off the bark and then cut it into bits of one-half inch or longer in length, as the purchaser may wish. These are then dried in the sun and placed in bags for export.

THE COLUMBIAN,

$1.50 A YEAR.

ODD ITEMS.

Nine monuments to Grant will be erected in this country, unless some of the present projects fail.

The centre of population in this country is rapidly moving westward, it being now a little to the south of Cincinnati.

During last year there were posted in England 26,000 letters without any address on them, and of these 1600 contained money.

A recent novelty in Parisian stationary is termed "Pompeiia paper." It is curiously mottled as if with the dampness of eighteen centuries.

During the last year there were sent to the Dead Letter office 4,848,000 letters, and among their contents were over $1,500,000 in cash and drafts.

At Live Oaks, Florida, an artesian well is being sunk, but water has not yet been found, though the drill has penetrated over one thousand feet.

Boston has just appropriated five thosand dollars towards a statue of William Lloyd Garrison, yet fifty years ago he was mobbed in that city and barely escaped hanging.

Near the foot of Moosic Mountain, some thirteen miles from Honesdale, Wayne county, this State, copper ore has been discovered, which yields sixty-five per cent of the metal.

An exchange says that a folded newspaper placed under the coat in the small of the back is an excellent substitute for an overcoat. Now is the time to subscribe.—Evansville Argus.

In a rubber manufactory at South Framingham, Mass., the employes have lately been suffering from a peculiar affection of the eyes supposed to be caused by the naptha used in preparing the cloth.

The New York Morning Journal, which on Friday assumed a new and handsome dress of type, opens its fall campaign with a regular circulation of over 150,000, bving an increase of 50,000 within the last eighteen months.

The country evidently has not a monopoly on patriotic politicians, witness the following advertisement in a recent London paper: "Advanced liberal constituency required, paying expenses by gentlemen devoting whole energies to public good."

In New Hampshire a law has just gone into effect which inflicts a fine of $20 for the sale of a cigarette to a boy or girl under sixteen years of age. At Newark, N. J, the public school authorities have decreed that cigarette smoking by pupils shall be punished by expulsion.

The bill introduced in the Georgia Legislature imposing a tax on bachelors has been withdrawn, and now another bill has been submitted which proposes a tax of $100 for every base ball game played in the State. Real legislative business must be scarce in that section

Keeping Apples During the Winter.

A most important factor in the keeping qualities of apples—and one that is frequently lost sight of—is the condition of the fruit at the time of picking. The more carefully fruit is handled the better it will keep; the slightest bruise or injury of any kind engenders decay.

The best time for picking apples is just before they are fully ripe; full maturity lessens their keeping quality 50 per cent. An apple that drops off the tree by a light touch is too ripe for long keeping.

It is one of nature's immutable laws that fruit, as soon as it has become fully matured, shall decay. This progress, although it may commence and progress very slowly, is sure to take place if the fruit is left to natural conditions, and every preserving method a
